

RUMELY PROBERS TO BE INVESTIGATED

Expensive Staff of Correspondents Excites Curiosity of Becker.

STODDARD REFUSED POST

Wouldn't Go to Germany for $25,000 and Write Series of Articles.

The activities of thirty or more special investigators who were sent out by Dr. Edward A. Rumely after he bought the Evening Mail in May, 1916, were the subject of an investigation begun yesterday by Deputy Attorney-General Alfred L. Becker as part of the general inquiry into the affairs of the former publisher.

The fact that the Evening Mail maintained a large staff of special correspondents and kept them traveling about the country came to light during an examination of the books of the Evening Mail by accountants of the Department of Justice. The books revealed that these correspondents during the first eighteen months of Dr. Rumely's proprietorship cost the Evening Mail much more money than was spent on gathering news independently of press associations in the local field.

Dr. Rumely was asked about this phase of his activities when he was examined before his arrest, and he explained that he obtained data for his articles on economics for the Evening Mail. They investigated crop and industrial conditions, he said.

Munition Plants Not Neglected.

Louis N. Hammerling, who distributed alleged pro-German advertising among foreign language newspapers, declared that his examination of the munition plants at work on contracts for the Entente Allies were not neglected by Dr. Rumely's special investigators.

Mr. Becker declared yesterday that he could not understand why the Evening Mail should have thought it necessary to maintain such an expensive department when other newspapers are content to rely on the press bureaus for information of this character except on special occasions. The whole matter will be gone into thoroughly, he said.

A despatch from Indianapolis last night said that the Department of Justice's bureau had discovered that Samuel Lewis Shank, former Mayor of that city, received an offer of employment from the Evening Mail in 1915 as a crop and market investigator.

According to Shank, he was introduced to Dr. Rumely by Dr. H. E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana, who was then writing special food articles for the Evening Mail. Shank said $12,000 a year was offered to him by Dr. Rumely.

Offer to Stoddard.

Mr. Becker declared yesterday that Dr. Rumely offered $25,000 to Henry L. Stoddard, the publisher from whom he bought the Evening Mail and who retained a loose hold upon it through a large bond interest, to go to Germany and send back a series of articles on economic conditions. Stoddard rejected the offer. S. S. McClure later became the Evening Mail's traveling observer.

Another subject of investigation provided by the accountants' examination of the books of the Evening Mail was the whereabouts of $100,000 that the Evening Mail publisher did not account for. The Government's figures, based on transcripts of the bank accounts of Count von Bernstorff, the former Ambassador, and Heinrich F. Albert, commercial attaché of the German Ambassador, put the total amount received by Dr. Rumely at $1,661,700.

The books of the Evening Mail account for $1,354,700 of this leaving a balance of $307,000. Of this balance, it is said that $205,000 went to Hammerling to distribute advertising in the foreign language press, and the remaining $102,000 will be looked into by the Deputy Attorney-General.

Mr. Becker was asked yesterday about a statement given out by S. Walter Kaufmann of Hays, Kaufmann & Lindner, special counsel for the German Embassy, that Dr. Rumely had been indicted for conspiring to conceal the German Government's ownership of the Evening Mail.

Mr. Kaufmann declared that the purchase of the Evening Mail had been accomplished in a perfectly legitimate manner and that money advanced by Herman Slicklen, a naturalized citizen who had acquired large wealth here as a coffee importer and retired to live in Germany, where he died October 8.

Mr. Becker replied that Mr. Kaufmann's explanation was "preposterous." He said that Kaufmann admitted to him that he had never acted as attorney for Slicklen except in a series of allegations in the Evening Mail transaction. Mr. Becker said that Kaufmann also admitted that he has no evidence in writing that Slicklen gave him authority to represent him in his dealings with the Evening Mail, he is alleged to have lent more than $1,300,000 to Rumely.

The Deputy Attorney-General said that it appeared singular that Slicklen should have permitted Kaufmann to represent him and kept Eugene Smith, his attorney for years, and his partners in the firm of Crozman & Slicklen in ignorance of the transaction.

Another Weak Point.

Mr. Becker pointed out as a further weak point in Mr. Kaufmann's statement the fact that Slicklen for the first and only time in Baden Baden in September, 1916. The first loan alleged to have been made to Rumely was for $750,000 on May 27, 1915, fourteen months before. This provided the purchase money for the Evening Mail. It was advanced in the form of a bank cashier's check issued on the order of Dr. Albert Crozman.

Kaufmann had only Albert's word that the money came from Slicklen. The Government maintains that the money committed to the German Government and that that Government is now the real owner of the Evening Mail. The newspaper is in the possession of its bondholders through the concession of the Allen Property Corporation.

Mr. Becker declared that Kaufmann said that his fee for his services was $2,000, which was paid by Albert Crozman for Slicklen. The Deputy Attorney-General said that practically all of Slicklen's fortune consisted of an interest in the firm of Crozman & Slicklen, valued at $5,000,000, considering the state of foreign exchange at the time. Mr. Becker said that it would have been highly wasteful for Slicklen to have the same from Germany even if they had been at his disposal.

More he said the bank accounts of Von Bernstorff and Albert do not disclose any sums transmitted to the credit of Herman Slicklen.

Interesting Feature.

An interesting feature of the alleged conspiracy to conceal the ownership of the Evening Mail by Germany was the part played in it by Kurt Reinsinger, the 26-year-old son of Mrs. Hugo Reinsinger. Reinsinger had an interest in the Evening Mail through the purchase of $25,000 of second mortgage bonds. On March 29, 1917, Reinsinger received the first installment of $1,000 in the form of a check for $1,000. Reinsinger, under examination, admitted that he had not previously communicated with Slicklen. He assumed that the representations to which Slicklen referred were statements made by Kaufmann when he bought his mortgage bonds that Slicklen had an interest in the Evening Mail.

Reinsinger admitted that the message puzzled him because he was not aware of any means by which he could protect Slicklen's interest in the Evening Mail. He said that Kaufmann, and the latter said that it confirmed what he had previously said about Slicklen's interest in the newspaper. Reinsinger said he had not questioned Kaufmann's word in the matter.

Reinsinger told Mr. Becker that for a year after leaving Harvard, in 1912, he was Slicklen's secretary. He said that Slicklen's partners asserted Reinsinger was an office boy. The Deputy Attorney-General said that it is preposterous to assume that Slicklen, a business man known for his conservatism, should have appointed Reinsinger as his representative here over the heads of his attorney and his business partners.

"Irish American" Affairs.

The affairs of the Irish American were brought into the Evening Mail inquiry yesterday. Rumely gave Anthony Brogan, publisher of the Irish American, $10,000 in 1915. Rumely explained that Brogan was a classmate at Notre Dame University. He said that he had previously received $7,000 for the Irish American, and that the $10,000 was an effort to keep the paper going and save some part of the original loan.

Rumely said he was not sure where the $10,000 came from, but he may have gotten it from Dr. Fuesler. Fuesler was one of the many distributors of German money to the Evening Mail. Brogan, a native of Detroit, last night tended to confirm a statement made by George Harvey in last week's issue of the Evening Mail that he did not account for the $10,000. He said that he had previously received $7,000 for the Irish American, and that the $10,000 was an effort to keep the paper going and save some part of the original loan.

Col. Harvey charges that Ford's influence was such that a promise of further consideration of the case was given, a promise that was backed by State Attorney-General Morton E. Lewis in closing the arrest of Rumely, "to the complete surprise of the Allen Property Corporation."

Col. Harvey makes his allegations the basis for an attack on President Wilson because of the Chief Executive's support of the candidacy for Senator of the "closest friend" of the secret paid agent of the German Government.

ROOSEVELT TO SPEAK IN MAINE

Will Address Mass Meeting at Islesboro To-day.

Special Despatch to THE SUN.

ISLESBORO, Me., Aug. 3.—Everything is ready for the big patriotic mass meeting here Sunday afternoon when Theodore Roosevelt is to speak on a subject most dear to his heart. He will address the throng at 4 P. M. from the porch of the Islesboro Inn, Dark Harbor.

The campaign band will give a concert an hour before the speaking and afterward, Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson will sing "The Star Spangled Banner."

Col. Roosevelt was in Belfast to-day that it appeared singular that Slicklen should have permitted Kaufmann to represent him and kept Eugene Smith, his attorney for years, and his partners in the firm of Crozman & Slicklen in ignorance of the transaction.
